Scope of the Journal

Earth, Planets and Space (EPS) covers scientific articles on Earth and Planetary Sciences, particularly geomagnetism, aeronomy, space science, seismology, volcanology, geodesy, and planetary science. EPS also welcomes articles in new and interdisciplinary subjects, including instrumentation. Only new and original content will be accepted for publication. No review papers will be accepted.

Express Letter

New article type for rapid publication

Beginning in January 2017, the “Letter” article type will become “Express Letter”. The maximum length for the Express Letters will be 5000 words; this includes the title, abstract, keywords, main text, declarations, references, figure legends, and table legends. The total number of figures and tables should be less than or equal to five.

Special Issue

EPS welcomes special issue proposals on focused topics that are within the scope of the journal. Policies are the same as the regular issues. Proposals should be submitted to the EPS Editor-in-Chief (editor-in-chief@earth-planets-space.org) by email. Guest editors can nominate a limited number of Frontier Letters that can be invited by the Editor-in-Chief without any APC.

Article Processing Charge

Letter/Express letter (from January 2017)	540 €
Full paper / Technical report	900 €

Members of the societies co-publishing EPS will obtain discounts. Details on the APC pricing can be found on the society site.
